Upward and onward went the Chicago White Sox yesterday, when, by capturing both games of the double-header from the Nationals, they drew up on Philadelphia and Detroit and are now only one game and a half behind the Athletics.

The triple attraction of two games and the Sox served to draw more than 7,000 fans to National Park, and they were treated to a good, hard-fought contest as a starter, but the second game was simply a slugging match, in which thirty-four hits for a total of fifty bases were made. Of the thirty-four hits, Chicago got twenty-one, which were good enough to give the visitors 13 runs.

Frank Smith has always considered Washington his clime, but yesterday he found in Walter Johnson a pitcher who could give him all he wanted. The welter wizard would have won his game by 1 to 0 had he received as good fielding support as was afforded Smith. Each team made six hits, and the only extra-base swat was a double by Rube, but, even at that, Johnson was so effective that he would have come out victorious but for a poor throw by O'Brien in the fifth inning. Johnson had seven strike-outs in his credit, and, while he gave three bases on balls and had a wild pitch, his failure to locate the plate did not prove costly or figure in either of the Sox's two runs.

Nationals Get One.

After having allowed two hits to go to waste in the second inning, Washington, in the third, scored the run which was expected to win the game. After Johnson had been thrown out, Milan singled, but was forced by Ganley. Ganley stole second, and crossed the plate on Delehanty's safety to left. In the fourth O'Brien singled and was sacrificed to second, but died.

A circus catch by Eddie Hahn in right was all that saved Chicago from being scored on at least once in the fifth inning. Milan got his second hit and stole second. Ganley, who has a great reputation for short hits out of reach of the infielders, changed tactics, and, with a mighty swat, started the ball on a line toward the southeast corner of the field. The smash looked good for a triple, but Hahn got back fast and jumped and speared the ball just as it was about to go over his head. Delehanty walked, but Clynner was out, and both men were left. The only other inning in which Washington got a runner on the bases was in the eighth, when Ganley led off by drawing a pass, but the cheering of the crowd was short lived, for Delehanty added to Hahn, and before Ganley could get back to first base a double play had been completed.

Chicago got two men on bases in the ninth inning and another pair in the second, but it was in the fifth that the visitors won. After Frank Smith had fanned, Hahn sent a grounder to O'Brien, who handled the ball cleanly until he went to throw. His leave to Altizer was too low to be fielded, and the game was safe. Jones followed with a single, which showed Hahn around as far as third, and from that point the right fielder scored on Isbell's single, while Jones made third. Clynner was out on the plate on Davis' chance.

In the sixth Rube doubled to center and a wild pitch moved him up, but Johnson showed real class by fanning the next two hitters, and the Sox did not have another good chance of scoring.

The second game was simply a swat-fest, and, although it is said that fans want batting, fully two thousand people left the park before the end of the show.

Case Patten and Ed Walsh were the pitchers selected, but neither was right. Patten faced a bombardment for six innings, during which Chicago laced out thirteen hits for eight runs, before he was pulled out and Gehring substituted. The Des Moines recruit was not much of an improvement, for the Sox made five more during his service of three innings. Walsh did not go three innings before Washington had made seven hits and four runs. This was enough for Fielder

JONES, and he sent in Nick Altrock, who held the Nationals safe during the remainder of the distance.

Hahn's triple, singles by Isbell, Davis, and Dougherty, together with a base on balls and an error, gave Chicago three in the first inning, before the crowd fully realized that the game was under way. In the fifth a single and a double gave the visitors another tally, and in the sixth they went at Patten with might and main, clouting the ball for five hits, which produced four runs.

Gehring got his in the seventh when the Sox bunched five singles, which were good for four more scores. The champions' last tally came in the ninth, as a result of a hit, an out, and an error. Milan's single, a sacrifice, Fielder Jones' miff of a fly, and an out were Delehanty's Washington in the first inning. The Nationals took the lead in the third by making six hits off Walsh, and scoring three times before Altrock went into the box. Delehanty's three-bagger and Clynner's single scored another run in the fourth, and in the seventh Delehanty poked the ball into the bleachers for a home run.

CAUGHT ON THE FLY.

To-day's game will be called at 4 o'clock.

The two victories were a big help to the Sox.

After a hard fight Norfolk finally won the flag in the Virginia League.

There was a delegation of Chicagoans behind the visitors bench pulling for the Sox.

Jack Warner got a hard crack on the knee cap in the first game, but declined to quit.

Canthion has selected Charley Smith to pitch to-day. Roy Patterson will probably be on the rubber for Chicago.

In the second game Blankenship went up to bat out of order, but the scorers "fixed" the error, giving the Sox a lead before the catcher hit the ball.

Charley Hickman got a fine ovation when he went out to the coaching line in the first inning of the opening game. It will be a long time before Washington fandom forgets "Cheerful."

It appears that in order to give a "square deal" all around President Ben Johnson has urged club managers not to try out any green pitchers when playing either one of the four clubs now fighting it out for the American League championship.

Just previous to the beginning of the first game "SNU" O'Loughlin called to the center of the diamond, and, on behalf of the Washington friends of the player, presented a neat watch fob and diamond studded Teddy Bear pin to Jake Atz, the Chicago utility player.

Atz played amateur and semi-professional ball in this city for years and he is one of the most popular players ever developed on local diamonds.

Instead of being roasted for making the poor throw yesterday O'Brien deserves all sorts of credit for being in the game. Pete has just commenced to recover from his recent illness, and the only reason that he donned a suit yesterday was in order to help out the club. He suffered throughout the first game, and was unable to get into the second contest. He is not likely to be in the lineup for some time, as he realizes that he is in no shape to do either himself or the team justice.

SHAKE-UP IN NAPS COMING.

Pitching staff and infield disappearing to the management.

Special to The Washington Herald.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 20.—Before the bell rings for play in the first game of the season of 1908, the Cleveland baseball club will have gone through one of the biggest shake-ups in local American League history. Under present plans half the pitching staff and half the infielders will be replaced by new men.

There will be a new utility outfielder, and probably a new utility pitcher. The pitchers whom Lajoie will rely upon for regular duty next season are Jess, Lieberhardt, Thielman, and Berger. Bernhard and Hess, upon whom wagers were asked some time ago, will figure in deals, as will also Clarkson, who has failed to come up to expectations.

Bill Bradley and George Stovall are to be replaced, the former by George Perking, the latter by Lister, Daubert, or Bill Hinckman.
